ASK THE MENAHEL

R' Hirsch Responds

I have a friend who likes to borrow my supplies. I recently realized that he does not give them back. He will lose them but will still ask to borrow more supplies. I want to do a chesed but I also don't want to end up with very little supplies for myself. What should I do?

When a person does a chesed for another person it brings a close feeling of friendship between the two of them. The giver feels good about being able to provide for his friend and the recipient feels taken care of by his friend. In your case, your friend is obviously not appreciative of your kindness because he does not show any concern for your belongings and you are only getting frustrated by having to supply him again with something he will lose. Your only choice is to explain to him clearly that you would like to help him out as a friend, but he must be careful to return your items. Hopefully he will understand and you will be able to provide him with genuine chesed.

R' Juravel Inspiring Talmidim

On Thursday Dec 15th, many boys were absent with the flu, although Rebbe was not feeling well either, he came and taught. He was very, very proud that many boys willingly and excitedly called in while sick to hear him teach the gemara. Some boys called his cell phone, and some called through the school phone on the wall. Since he wanted to be closer to the speaker on the school line, he sat on the side of the room closest to the phone and asked the Talmidim to turn their desks toward him. It was quite a sight, and we felt compelled to take pictures of the special moment. May R' Juravel have a complete refua sheleimah - please daven for our Dear Rebbe, Moshe Shlomo B-n Yosef Eliezer
